

THE BRANWELL WUTHERING HEIGHTS 1898

49:00, 2018, Jim Finn (director's website)

SYNOPSIS:

When Branwell — the ne'er-do-well, tubercular brother of the Brontë sisters — discovered that Emily was writing her first novel, he offered to be her editor. Once he realized that he was the model for the alcoholic Hindley Earnshaw character, he reimagined the story as a musical memoir of his own life with Hindley as the hero. Edited and arranged from the damaged film fragments, notes, sheet music and letters to his best friend Francis, this weird and revisionist adaptation is meant to have premiered on the 50th anniversary of the deaths of Emily and Branwell Brontë.

ABOUT THE MUSIC

The soundtrack was created by musician Colleen Burke. She brought together musicians like Jim White (The Dirty Three), Sally Timms (The Mekons), Michael James and Munaf Rayani (Explosions in the Sky) to create this strange revisionist musical. This is the fourth film that Jim Finn and Colleen Burke have collaborated on. The other films Interkosmos, La Trinchera Luminosa del Presidente Gonzalo and Chums from Across the Void have all gone on to have some kind of cult musical status.

ABOUT THE CAST & CREW

Jim Finn brings back actors from previous films to play the two Cathy's: Isabella Pinheiro from Chums and Nandini Khaund from Interkosmos. Murray Gordon (Heathcliff), a South African philosopher and tech entrepreneur, is acting in his first film though his brother played a minor character in Roman Polanski's Macbeth. Linda Montano (Hindley Earnshaw) is a seminal performance artist best known for her acupuncture-head video Mitchell's Death and being roped together for a year with Taiwanese performance artist Tehching Hsieh. Jesse Stiles returns to work his sound magic. He teaches at Carnegie Mellon and has worked on projects by the Merce Cunningham Dance Company, The Yes Men, filmmaker Penny Lane as well as various films by Jim Finn. Filmmaker Josh Lewis created the handmade 16mm film emulsion for the project at his artist-run lab in Ridgewood, Queens.

ABOUT JIM FINN

"Steeped in the obsolete language of revolutionary art," The New York Times said Jim Finn's films "often play like unearthed artifacts from an alternate universe." Critic J. Hoberman in The Village Voice calls Jim Finn "the solitary vanguard of post-Communist Communist cinema". His films, according to Variety, "upturn notions of documentary and fiction, propaganda thought, reality and restaging, and even what an 'experimental film' actually is." His award-winning movies have been called "Utopian comedies" & "trompe l'oeil films", and his Communist Trilogy is in the MoMA's collection. He's had retrospectives in seven countries and screenings all over the world at festivals like Sundance, Rotterdam, Sao Paulo, AFI and Edinburgh and museums, universities and cinemathèques. He is featured in a 2010 Phaidon Press book called Take 100—The Future of Film: 100 New Directors. His most recent project was the Inner Trotsky Child video series which premiered each year from 2013-2015 at the New York Film Festival. He was born in St. Louis in 1968 and teaches at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn.
